President JEFFERSON DAVIS.

Received at Telegraph Office, Feb. 26, 1862.
Received at Bulletin Office, 5:00 p. m. RICHMOND, Feb. 25 .- The President has sent his Message to Congress. He says since the delivery of the last Message. events have demonstrated that the Government attempted more than it had the power successfully to achieve, hence in its effor to protect the whole territory and seaboard, inland, it has been so unfortunate as recently to encounter serious disseters.

At the formation of Government, we were great in extent, but destitute in the means of prosecuting the war on so gigantic scale as that attained - work shore were mainly found North and our first object was to establish necessary manufactures, and in the mean time purchase in Europe as far as practicable, whatever was required for the public detence. In April last, active military preparations in Europe interposed many obstacles to the Procurement of arms. S. A. T. A. He says he has no official report of the discomfitures at Roancke and Fort Donel son. Enough known of the surrender at-Roanoke to make us feel deeply humiliated, however imperfect may have been the means of defence, he still entertained hope.

Our reported loss at Fort Donelson was greatly exaggerated. In as much as we were not only unwilling but unable to be-lieve that a large army of our people. would surrender without a desperate effort to cut their way through investing forces, whatever may have been their num-ber, and endeavor to make a Junction with other divisions of the army. But, in the absence of official reports, premature statements were accredited. In the meantime strenuous efforts were made to forward reinforcements to the army at positions threatened, and I cannot doubt that bitter disappointment we have borne is moving the people to still greater exeraccordant with our position and as favorable to our cause as those which marked WALTER K. MARTIN & Co earlier periods of the war. He says the reports Secretaries of War and Navy, exhibits resources to conduct the war have

A New Canada Grievance spain the United States.

We can hardly suppose that the attention of Lyens has been directed to a custom prevailing in the Federal States of compelling British subjects, making temporary visits there, to pledge allegiance to the United States. A case of this kind has been brought under our notice, A respectable resident of this city went to see his son at St. Louis, and he was only allowed to return to Canada on hinds him to bear allegiance to the United States; and not, under any circumstance, to take up arms against them;

Office of Provest Marshall,
St. Louis, Dec. 2, 1861. DESCRIPTION OF PERSON.

Name Age Color of eyes Nativity Residence, Upper Canada

I hereby acknowledge that I accept this pass upon my word of honor, solemnly pledged, that I will ever bear true faith and allegiance to the United States of America, and that I will consider such allegiance as paramount to that due to any other Power, Sovereignty, or State whatever; that I will never take arms against the United States or those acting under its authority, or give aid, information or comfort to its enemies, and that I will do all in my power as a citizen to discourage the present rebellion and preserve the Federal Union.

Judging from the number of this certificate, which figures up over 75,000, this practice is being carried into effect upon a prodigious scale. We are charitable enough to suppose that a large proportion of those from whom this pledge is exacted are not British subjects, but Americans another. The case before us, however, shows that British subjects are not exempted from this degrading ordeal. It might not be unreasonable to demand Society, of which you are Secretary and from all persons travelling in the States Treasurer, and oblige, their parole d'honneur that they would not take part in this contest with the Southern States. But to compel British subjects. ing the States, to subscribe such a declaration as the above, is an outrage that demands the intervention of the imperial authorities. We trust the fact may not escape the attention of the British Em bassador at Washington, in order that the matter may be properly represented in the

The Mobile Register and Advertiser of Saturday says:

A deputation has reached this city bear ne offers and proofs of a generous sympathy and fraternity from the city of Montgomery to the city of Mobile. What they are we are not at liberty to say at present. They are such, however, as to be most overtures are made for the defense of the city, and such as to illustrate the prompt and patriotic liberality of our fellow-citizens of the cipital. Their good effects will soon be visible.

Besides these offers of practical and substantial sympathy, we are not restrained of the pleasure of announcing that a full comany of what may be tore men'' of Montgomery have offered their services to the commanding general to aid in repelling the attacks of the enemy upon Mobile. Gen. Bragg has accepted their services; and they will be down in a few days, one hundred strong, self-equipped and sell armed with the best double-bar-reied guns. Our old friend and fellow-citizen, Col. T. B. Bethea, is the bearer of the tender in behalf of the corps to which he belongs.

The Advertiser and Register also publishes an extract from a letter from the interior, saying

The force that may thus be called ou may be lacking in exact drill and camp duty, but, brought into action, either be-hind batteries, in ambush or rifle pit, they will never succumb to the Lincolnites.
